| Grant Purpose | This program was chosen so that students would be able to attend live theater performances and learn to write plays of their own. It will strengthen students' knowledge of how stories or plays are written, help them to identify parts of a story, and practice communication skills through drama. Through this program students will produce a written piece and hopefully become excited and motivated to write. Students will work with writers and performers from Florida Studio Theatre to motivate and ex |
| Grant Activities | The series opens with a performance at the theater of The Velveteen Rabbit. In the classroom, students study genres and explore ways in which authors hook their readers into following a story. Characters, setting, plot and dialogue are discussed as students read works by well known authors. Students will be introduced to good and varied writing by successful children's authors, a wide variety of books. Patricia Polacco's books are primarily personal narratives or stories handed down through |
