Grant Purpose	This program was chosen so that students would be able to attend live theater performances and learn to write plays of their own. It will strengthen students' knowledge of how stories or plays are written, help them to identify parts of a story, and practice communication skills through drama. Through this program, students will produce a written piece, as a class and as an individual writer, to be submitted to the Young Playwright's Festival. Participation and involvement in a local and celeb
Grant Activities	The series opens with , The Velveteen Rabbit by Kevin Del Aguila, based on the book by Margery Williams. Following The Fall Show students will see, WRITE IT UP WRITE IT DOWN. This show inspires students to write their own plays and participate in the 2017 Young Playwrights Festival. Actors will perform at least 2 award-winning plays written by youth as a model, in addition to using improvisation, participatory learning, and interactive in-class workshops as tools to inspire writing. The thir
Grant Budget Items	Funding of this grant will provide a year's subscription for 110 students to work with Florida Studio Theater as developing writers in addition to attending live performances to scaffold and motive the writing process. Travel expenses are also funded by the grant.
After Grant Plans	Plays will be revisited and writing narrative skills will continue throughout the year.
